

What does it mean to transition?

Transitioning is a process of changing your gender identity, expression, role and/or sex assigned at birth to align with your internal sense of self. It is a personal journey and can involve many different steps and experiences. Some people transition through hormone therapy, surgery, or both, while others may choose to transition through social means only. The process of transitioning is unique to each individual and can be a challenging but rewarding experience.